NEOFIX make hypnotic, sensory and sometimes downright psychedelic music & sonic art.

The ambient experimental pop duo hailing from Adelaide's West Side are breaking boundaries with their sonic and visual art which draws inspiration from urban, natural, and even celestial spaces. Creators Johnny and Cate live by the ethos "everything is something" as they seek to capture the surreal and complex world around them, collecting sound samples, footage, and photography wherever they go. These raw materials are deconstructed and reassembled by the duo into the music and art of Neofix.

Although officially Neofix formed in late-2018, Cate and Johnny have long been entrenched in music and art.

Cate has a Degree in Music from the Elder Conservatorium and has extensive experience as a performer where she is renowned for her soulful RnB influenced vocals. Through Cate's participation in the Australian Hip-Hop scene, she has supported national and international acts such as Fat Joe, Hilltop Hoods, Tech9 and Seth Sentry.

Johnny has a Diploma in Music as well as a PhD in Social Anthropology, both from the University of Adelaide, which is where the duo first met. Like Cate, Johnny has an extensive history of performance as lead guitarist in popular local Progressive Rock bands, Greek bands & Funk bands.

Johnny's PhD saw him living in Athens conducting field research amongst artists and performers during the height of Greece's social and economic crisis. Within the crisis afflicted city of Athens, the guerrilla art scene thrived by making use of the unique forgotten urban spaces and political contexts offered by the city itself. This radical DIY approach meant art and music could be presented anywhere within the city streets, on the crumbling rooftops of 19th century neo-classical buildings or in abandoned factories. This approach to art making, inspired the practice of Neofix, who self-produce all their own music, film clips and art. This deep connection to space, place and time and complete creative freedom forms the basis of Neofix's artistic vision, and their musical and visual compositions.

Experimenting with sound samples from interesting places is a driving force in the Neofix production as they manipulate these into playable instruments to capture a truly unique audio footprint of that space within their music. Combined with the signature Neofix dreamy vocals and psychedelic guitar, the result is ambient, textured, and atmospheric music to elevate, inspire and re-imagine the human experience.
